

MEDICATION DISCONTINUED?

It's a story that everybody can relate to, you try a number of products throughout the years without success and then finally you find one that works. Then just when you thought your luck had changed, the Company ceases to manufacture the product and you find yourself back at square one.

When this happens with Medications, there may be no alternative to the product available and often where there is an alternative product it's far more expensive and often less effective. However patients who find themselves in this dilemma need worry no more.

The problem solvers at Compoundia can often compound discontinued products for patients and often at a similar cost to the original product. In some cases, they may even be able to improve upon the formula.

Because of the vast costs associated with manufacturing medications, large companies may be unable to justify the cost of manufacturing lines that are not "big sellers". As a result of this, many medications disappear from our pharmacies each year.

However, Compoundia is changing this trend by tailor-making formulas for patients. "We're not doing anything new" says the manager Tim Riley, "...compounding is at the heart of traditional pharmacy practice, we're just using new technology to prepare higher quality products".

So if you've found yourself caught by a manufacturer who has discontinued a product, contact the professional staff at Compoundia. Even if you don't have the formula, they may be able to research a recipe for the product, or make an equivalent. It's just one more way that Compoundia makes the difference.
